A Few Words About Auglaize Gardens

THERE are a number of points we at Auglaize have always tried to keep uppermost in our minds, and to use as guiding factors in our business. For one thing, we try to make our list of each variety of plants we grow representative, to have the best of the old and to add new varieties as quickly as possible—so that we meet the needs of any customer. Again we try to grow only good plants and to sell them at as low a price as is consistent with the quality of the stock and the scarcity of the variety. We do not grow varieties which we do not feel have merit—nor will we ship poor, skimpy, devitalized roots. We want every customer to get full value and more for every dollar he spends with us. We specialize on four varieties of plants, Hemerocallis, Oriental Poppies, Peonies and Bleeding Heart, and devote our entire efforts to producing the best varieties and the finest plants in each group. We ask you to bear these thoughts in mind when you peruse this price list, then we hope we may have the opportunity of proving to you that we live up to these standards—on this basis we solicit your order.

HEMEROCALLIS (Daylilies)

RECENT years have seen great improvements in Hemerocallis as well as a great increase in their popularity. The season of bloom has been much extended and now we have varieties which open in May, others which do not open until September, and a continuous procession between these dates.

Many of the new Daylilies produce far more flowers to a stem than the older types, and remain open for a longer period. The flowers of some of these are very large, six inches or more in diameter while others especially the multiflora hybrids are very much smaller but are usually borne in clusters. The color range now includes not only the older orange and yellows, but buffs, pinks, reds, and bicolors in varying shades. Some varieties have small grassy foliage while on others the foliage is coarse almost palm-like thus offering a wide variety.

Any garden, even if small, can use quite a number of these plants and they will add a charming note over a long season if care has been used in selecting varieties. Hemerocallis are perfectly hardy. They grow well either in full sun or partial shade, in dry or wet soil and demand minimum care. We present a carefully selected list which includes most of the outstanding varieties, both the older and more recent introductions, early to late blooming and a wide range of beautiful colors. We have used a ★ to indicate some of the varieties which especially appeal to us. The plants which we ship have from three to five stalks except in the case of a few of the very scarce varieties, but all are large strong plants which will take hold and grow readily. In the list (E) indicates an early blooming variety, (M) midseason, and (L) late. The name in parenthesis following the plant name is that of the originator.

If you are interested in these varieties we will be glad to quote you provided stock is available.

ORIENTAL POPPIES

ON COMPARING our list of Oriental Poppies with those published in previous years many of our customers will notice that we are offering fewer varieties this season. We have felt, for some time, that many of the poppies offered to-day are too similar to some other variety, and that such long lists are confusing to gardeners wishing to make selections.

We have therefore decided to follow the recommendations of the National Poppy Committee and are listing in Group One only the varieties which are recommended by this committee. All of these varieties are tried and proven kinds. They all differ either in color, habit of growth, form of flower, or season of bloom, and selections from this list can be made with perfect confidence that each and every plant is outstanding in its class.

We have indicated a number of varieties in this list with a ★. These are varieties which are in our opinion especially outstanding in their particular color classes, and if only a small number of plants are wanted, selections made from this group, we feel, will meet every requirement.

We offer only strong two year old field grown plants which we ship during their dormant season, August and September. Plants of this size when shipped at this time present no difficulties in transplanting, and are much more certain to grow than the smaller rooted cuttings frequently offered for spring shipment, the use of which we do not advise.

PEONIES

PEAONIES have, every since Auglaize Gardens was established, been our main specialty. We have never tried to grow every variety on the market, but have always selected and propagated those varieties which we felt would prove most satisfactory to our customers. We have endeavored to keep this list short enough not to prove confusing, but with the thousands of varieties introduced into commerce it is difficult to keep it as short as might seem desirable and still include therein most of the worth while ones. It has always been our policy to add promising new varieties as they were introduced and to cull from our list such plants as were superseded by similar and better kinds.

Our peonies are grown with exacting care. Our soil is fertile and ideally adapted for producing strong healthy roots. Our fields are completely equipped with an irrigating system so that we are independent of weather conditions. We believe these facilities have helped us to gain an enviable reputation as producers of fine peonies and we endeavor to zealously guard this reputation.

To assist our customers in making selections we have divided our listings into three groups. The first group might be termed a "Master List".

GROUP ONE

Fine peonies for all around usefulness. In this group we have collected 90 of the finest Auglaize Garden peonies which sell at popular prices. All of these flowers are double or semi-double except the group marked Japs and Singles, they include all types and early, midseason and late blooming varieties. Every one of these flowers is distinct and different from any of the others. They are all varieties which perform satisfactorily under almost all conditions. All of them have good stems and therefore are suitable for garden or landscape use. They can, of course, also be used for cut flowers.

We recommend this group with entire confidence and feel certain that selections made from this list will meet your highest expectations. The varieties which we have marked with a ★ are those which especially appeal to us and which we would consider outstanding in a group of this type.

The listing is as follows: First, the name; Second, the official rating of the American Peony Society; Third, the originator, and then the color and general description of the flower and plant. The season of bloom is indicated by—(E) for early, (M) for midseason, and (L) for late.

GROUP THREE

This is a miscellaneous group in which we have placed a number of the popular, low priced, older varieties which are quite common, and which you will see in most gardens. There are some fine flowers among these but they are not as good as those in Group One and may be used as fill-ins, or for cut flowers. Included in this group are also a number of varieties that have outstandingly beautiful flowers but because of weak stems or irregular blooming habits are not suitable for general landscape use. Some of these such as Solange, Kelway's Glorious, Hansina Brand and Tourangelles are well worth while growing in the cutting garden for their beautiful blooms as cut flowers but they should not be used for general garden purposes.

TREE PEONIES

IN RECENT years considerable interest has been displayed in Tree Peonies. These peonies differ from the Herbaceous peonies in that they form a woody stock which does not die to the ground each winter. Their color range is considerably greater, and includes some very beautiful yellow flowers not found in the Herbaceous type. There are singles, semi doubles and full doubles among them. They bloom several weeks earlier than the Herbaceous peonies.

We do not grow this type of peony ourselves, but have made arrangements with a grower who specializes in them to supply them for our customers. The plants that we offer are two year old plants grown in five inch pots which can be set out at any time during the season. We can also supply three and four year old field grown plants. If you are interested in this class of peonies drop us a line and we will be glad to mail you a special price list describing them and quoting you.
